LEADERSHIP IN SAFETY

THE ADMINISTRATOR'S ROLE

Presented by The Laboratory Safety Institute

School Administrators and managers play a critical role in the development and implementation of effective safety programs.

This seminar discusses the most important issues for safety program development: involvement, liability, regulatory compliance. Topics include: the scope of the problem, legal aspects, three critical questions, six leadership principles, and effective safety programs.

This four hour seminar is conducted by Jim Kaufman, Ph.D. President/ CEO of the Laboratory Safety Institute. Administrators throughout the United States have enjoyed hearing LSI's unique approach to effective Environment Health and Safety (EHS) programs. For over 35 years, LSI has made thinking about health, safety and the environment an energizing and enjoyable experience. Don't miss this special opportunity.

These leadership seminars have been eye-opening for the administrators. They learn about their indispensable role in safety excellence - leadership. They become primed to do more to promote health and safety in their institutions.

This interesting and entertaining presentation also confronts one of the more common excuses for not having or improving the health and safety program ... "it costs too much." This is simply not true. Excellent health and safety programs do not need to cost large amounts of money. These simple concepts, questions and principles will allow you to improve your organization's environmental health and safety program. It will help you to better understand your role in the process. This is the booster shot your EHS program needs to take it to the next level.
